BUILDING SKILLS

The mission of Team Activities for Special Kids is to build our participant's skills through opportunities and successes in athletic and social situations. By giving our athletes with special needs a positive experience we, in turn, increase their athletic and social skills. Often children and young adults with special needs lack specific skill sets to participate in athletics and/or social activities. By participating in a recreational league where our rules, equipment and game play can be modified to meet each athlete's need and ability, our athletes experience success. These positive experiences and successes lead to overall improvement. We are often told by TASK families that they see an increase in both athletic and social skills not only at TASK activities, but also when participants play with neighbors, friends, and family members as well as in physical education classes at school.

BUILDING SELF-ESTEEM

Often children with special needs face many obstacles. Unfortunately, these obstacles can adversely affect a child's self-esteem. One of our missions at TASK is to increase self-esteem in our participants. Many times our athletes experience difficulty in the academic, physical and social arenas. We find when giving our athletes the right amount of support, they can and do succeed in these areas. Our successes are not measured by trophies won or points scored, rather by little steps that aid in the improvement of overall skills. Any success - big or small - leads to increased self-esteem.

BUILDING RELATIONSHIPS

Athletes enjoy interacting and connecting with each other on and off the field. Countless friendships have been made between athletes, families and volunteers. Participants invite each other to birthday parties, to the movies or to go bowling. They talk to each other on the phone and text. E-mails fly back and forth with the chatter about TASK events and social activities. TASK also is a place where parents can network, socialize and feel comfortable with each other. Because everyone at TASK has some variation of a special need, there is an acceptance among peers and parents. Parents have commented that they can relax and enjoy watching their child, instead of always worrying about what others are thinking, unlike in other athletic leagues.

In addition to relationships for our athletes and parents, TASK has also reached out to the community and has involved it in the program as well. TASK has several relationships with the high schools and organizations that help to provide volunteers and support for the program. St. Louis area high schools including Cor Jesu Academy, Christian Brothers

College, DeSmet Jesuit High School, Mehlville School District, Notre Dame High School, Parkway School District, St. Joseph's Academy, St. John Vianney, St. Louis University High School and Ursuline Academy have provided a wonderful group of volunteers to help support our athletes over the years. It is a great experience to watch the relationships between the athletes and volunteers develop as the season progresses. We have found that our volunteers have had positive influences on our athlete's lives. Because of their experiences, some volunteers have even chosen a career path that includes working with people with special needs.

Each summer since 2004, TASK teams up with Christian Brothers College (CBC St. Louis) to provide a one-week day camp for TASK athletes. During the week, the camper's experiences include science experiments, dance classes, drama performances, sports and recreational activities, arts and crafts and use of technology. TASK/CBC Camp provides 75-100 athletes and volunteers with a great week.

BUILDING COMMUNITY

Since 1996, TASK has provided a service to the community unlike any other. Through acceptance, support and encouragement, TASK provides our athletes a safe environment where all experience success. In addition, we have provided a place for our volunteers to help the community and learn about others' experiences, TASK has also cemented relationships with local and national companies/corporations who help the program through financial support and/or other donations. Optimist clubs, Knight of Columbus Chapters and American Legion Posts all have supported our program in a variety of ways over the years.

BUILDING THE FUTURE

As the years pass and the numbers of participants increase, we are actively raising money to build our own facility. The facility would be a place where our athletes and parents could continue to benefit from the mission of the TASK program. Open gyms, fields and recreation rooms, are becoming more and more difficult to find. A centrally located center would alleviate the need to constantly secure places to play and would allow a permanent place to hold activities. It would also allow for the continued expansion of the program. TASK is actively looking for land and partnerships to make this dream a reality.
